

NEWS OF DAY AT SCOTSDALE BRIEFLY TOLD

Josephine Steele, Valedictorian of East Huntingdon High School.

COMMENCEMENT TUESDAY

Special to The Courier.
SCOTSDALE, May 22.—The sermon to the graduating class of the East Huntingdon Township High School was delivered in the Methodist Episcopal Church at Tarr last evening. Rev. J. E. Hutchinson, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, Scottdale, preached the sermon. Music was furnished by the school. There are 24 in the class this year, with Josephine Steele taking first honors and Helen Myers second. The other members are: Grace Albright, Janet Bell, Helen Balcerak, Aileen Barton, Irene Beitel, Pearl Buttermore, Florence Gamm, Peter Gubula, Maude Hise, Edward Honsberger, Charles Hosteler, Frances Houser, Edith Hout, Rebecca Leighty, Ruth Leighty, Veronica McMahon, Mary Miller, Christine Noll, Wendell Noll, Raymond Shannon, Catherine Shiner and Grace Taylor.

The graduation exercises will be held Thursday evening at the Scottdale Theatre. Dr. Will Grant Chambers of State College will be the speaker. Miss Steele, the valedictorian, and Miss Myers, the other honor student, will have parts in the program.

Tonight in the Methodist Episcopal Church at Tarr the eighth grade commencement exercises will be held. A very good program has been arranged, with C. F. Maxwell, Assistant Superintendent of the Westmoreland county schools, making the principal address.

Colleagues Cancel Game.

There was no ball game Saturday. Dick Guy's Collegians cancelled their date with the Scottdale Independents.

Building to Be Painted.

The Everson Board of Education is receiving bids for the painting of the school building.

Children Demonstrate Work.

Rev. N. E. Tannehill, superintendent of the Coke Mission of the Methodist Episcopal Church, had 100 children from the mission present at the Scottdale church last evening and presented a program showing the work done by the mission. The Scottdale Methodist Episcopal Church is one of the most ardent supporters of the Coke Mission.

To Wed in Philippines.

Miss Elizabeth Reed, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Reed of Arthur Avenue, left today for San Francisco, Cal., where she will visit with her sister, Mrs. Jack Miller, and later sail for the Philippines where she will visit her sister, Jessie, and where she will be married to C. L. Hogan.

MOTHER!

Clean Baby's Bowels with
"California Fig Syrup"

Hurry, mother! If baby has colic, diarrhoea, food souring, feverish breath, coated tongue, is restless and can't sleep because of clogged bowels, give a half-teaspoonful of California Fig Syrup. It moves the wind and gas and all the souring food, bile and poison right out of the tender little bowels without cramping or overacting and baby usually gets peaceful relief. Contains no narcotics or soothing drugs.

Millions of mothers depend upon California Fig Syrup to keep baby's bowels clean, sweet and regular. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has full directions for infants in arms and children of all ages plainly printed on bottle. Mother, you must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup. Advertisement.

TRAINING EMPLOYEES IS VITAL PHASE OF INDUSTRIAL SUCCESS

Engineers at State College Meet
Critique High School
Preparation.

STATE COLLEGE, May 22.—If they know what is best for their own interests, industrial plant heads throughout the country will establish training schools for their employees. This was the declaration of A. B. Gibson of Pittsburgh, head of the Westinghouse Technical Night School, in an address to 80 engineers attending the annual engineering extension convention at the Pennsylvania State College. Various methods for training shopmen and other industrial employees formed the principal topic for the meetings.

"The individual, the industry and the community are all benefitted through a well established night training school," Mr. Gibson declared. "Individuals by virtue of this training are fitted for more responsible positions in any industry; his character is developed and his ideals elevated, for the purpose and policy of such schools is to train men of character, men who are honest, industrious and up-right. The industry benefits through a reduction of labor turnover, more efficient employees and possibilities are greater for promotions within the ranks."

During the session this morning high school teachers were criticized for not showing greater interest in boys who leave or graduate from school without having settled upon a definite aim in life and selected a vocation. "Too many young men leave school and take the first job that is offered, whether or not they are fitted for that particular line of work. High schools can do much to better such conditions. Educational extension work in the coal mining districts and industrial engineering courses were also discussed. The meetings will continue today and tomorrow."

BETWEEN FRIENDS

Neil—Had my fortune told today.
Belle—No doubt you were told that you would get a rich husband.

Neil—No; the fortune teller simply said that I would acquire a husband shortly.

Belle—Oh, I suppose she sized you up and decided that any old thing in the shape of a man would satisfy you.

The Betraying Accent.

A Scotchman visiting London was advised by a friend to patronize a certain restaurant, being told that the food was good and the prices very reasonable. Desiring to be fully posted, the Scot inquired, "And what about a tip for the waitress? How much would she expect?"
"Nothing—when she heard you speak," was his friend's reply.

De Profundis!

HE WAS a friend—a friend to all the people—ever eager to lighten their burdens; to share their joys; to mitigate their sorrows.

And his passing leaves a civic void that coming years will find hard to fill.

The entire city, united in sorrow, joins in extending its heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved members of his congregation.

Father Burns has passed on—but his memory will long endure!

The HOME GARDEN

What is Home without a Garden?

Lettuce Salad Secrets

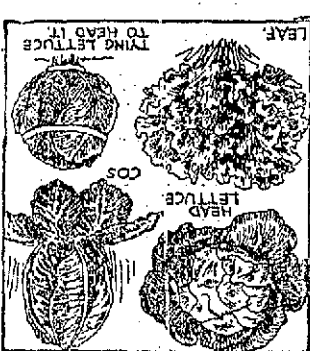

Lettuce growing is becoming a science, since this best of all salad vegetables has become a staple article of diet, and is in the market 365 days of the year. Commercially, the head lettuce has almost displaced the other leaf varieties, but the home gardener knows that leaf lettuce is the earliest of all and just as finely flavored and tender as the big cabbage varieties. It is also the first lettuce to mature for table use, so a small planting of a good leaf variety is advisable to give a crop before the head varieties are ready to cut.

Romaine or cos lettuce is making a very successful bid for home garden popularity. It is much easier to grow than the head lettuce, especially after the weather is warm, and it is fully as delicate. In fact, many people esteem it more highly for its tenderness.

The leaves, being long and narrow, and growing upright, naturally blanch the heart and this process is easily assisted by tying the tips of the leaves together lightly. It matures quickly.

Sowings of leaf, head and cos lettuce give a good succession.

The real way to get head lettuce that will really head and the only way is to start the plants either in pots or in a hotbed or cold frame, when the weather will not permit planting in the open and have the plants growing along to transplant as soon as the weather permits. Lettuce can be grown in the open ground or the greater part of the winter in many portions of the South and in others with a cold frame protection it can be kept going all winter. Seedlings can be raised ready to set out in late February or March.

Head lettuce gives gardeners a great deal of trouble, largely because they drill the seeds into the soil and leave them too thick in the rows until they are so far advanced in growth the thinning does no good. Transplanting is most essential as the check to the growth seems to thicken up the plant and start it on its way to a head. When transplanting, after three or four leaves have been made, cut off half of them, that is, strip the tips of the leaves for about half their length. Lettuce must have heavily fertilized ground and the highest standard of cultivation. The plants must be kept cultivated and growing at top speed. Water should be supplied when a dry spell impends. If the ground is rich, well tilled, the plants, given a distance of at least six inches apart in the rows after transplanting and kept well cultivated, there is no reason why any gardener shouldn't have reasonably good head lettuce. The great problem in lettuce growing is to keep it growing without a check.

Men at One Time Used Rouge and Plucked Eyebrows

Plucked eyebrows may be an ornament or a disfigurement, according to the eye of the beholder. The fact remains, however, that in the time of Richard II of England men plucked out their own eyebrows quite as fastidiously as did the women. Strong men may weep or shudder at the above indictment. It is but the beginning of a longer one.

Macbeth's first rouge-pot really was not intended for her who at all. The cave-men of Europe hollowed it out of stone so that he could use it to grind ochre and other colors for the painting of his own face. After he had finished, the stone-age woman could have what remained for herself.

Macbeth, to make the lusher of the eye seem longer, blacker and more sweeping as they touch the cheek, is now only a feature of the boarder dressing table. Yet who used it first? Man? You've guessed it. Centuries before the historic period the people who preceded the dynastic Egyptians had a ruler who imitated the idea of blackening the eyelids above and below to make the eyes seem larger and more beautiful and brilliant.

Earrings were first adopted by men and have been popular with them since primitive times. They dangled in the first instances from the ears of savage chieftains. The tamarae of the Bible gave the custom considerable vogue. And it is a time-honored and venerable superstition among sailors and fishermen that plucking the ears cures and prevents sore eyes.

Many famous men have worn earrings—Sir Walter Raleigh, William Shakespeare and the Earl of Southampton.

It is to be expected that man will enter a general denial to all of the above accusations. For inconsistency, too, like many other things, was masculine first and feminine later. These are the words of Susan Seaton in the May Designer.

Coal Strike Halts
Business Recovery

Chicago Black Diamond.

According to the Federal Reserve Board's monthly review, the industrial outlook would be pronounced definitely good were it not for labor disturbances. During April, the review states, pronounced activities were seen in many basic lines, particularly in the metal industries, and that, aside from voluntary unemployment, a decided increase in the number of employees at work was noted.

Thus it appears that industry, after more than a year of depression, is feeling the line and all ready to get back into the race. It is all set to go, but is being held back by labor disturbances. One of these disturbances, if not the principal one, is the strike by the organized coal miners.

The country today is like a horn of plenty, filled to repletion and almost brimming over with the fruits of life that make this old world a grand place to live in when everything is going right. To carry the analogy further, this horn of plenty is all ready to empty its contents upon the broad expanses of the land, but cannot do so because the pressure that must be brought to bear is not sufficient to tip it over. This pressure, in order to perform its function, requires the full cooperation of many elements, each of which must exert its own particular lifting power. Included in these elements are industry, agriculture, finance and labor. The first three are ready to do their part, but the last named has refused to lend a hand, so our horn of plenty hangs suspended, its fruits out of reach of all.

The farmer, the basic factor in all reckonings where the country's prosperity is concerned, has come back into his own and during the months of next fall and early winter is expected to spend more money than in the past year. Because the pendulum swung against him for two years, he has done but little buying, but now that it is swinging in his favor, he is expected to take care of necessities. Industry realizes this, and is already making an effort to increase its output so as to meet the increased demand, but is being held back to a great extent through a natural fear as to what the outcome of the present labor crisis will be. The financial world today has more idle money than since the armistice was signed, and is only too willing to loan it for development purposes, provided conditions are right, but is being held back by the same fear that is stalling the hand of industry.

In the field of building activities, a recent survey shows that $8,055,084, 112 worth of construction work is needed in order that present needs along that line may be met. Some of this work, millions of dollars worth of it, already is being done, but normal building activities will not prevail until present conditions have shaped themselves to permit a feeling of confidence relative to the next year's prospects.

What the country needs today is a settlement of the wage controversy between the miners and the operators, and the only thing that will bring this about is a willingness on the part of the striking miners to take a reduction in pay so that those who own the mines in the union fields can compete in the open market with the mine owners in the non-union fields. This must be the first step.

Additionally, and of the broadest importance to the entire country, is the necessity for coal to reach a lower price level in keeping with other basic commodities. Coal enters into the manufacturing, handling and shipping cost of almost every product, and its relation to railroad rates is tremendously important. Cheaper coal must be available before business can progress, and the underlying necessity to obtain that lower price is the acceptance of a lower wage by the miners who have been out on a strike since April 1. When this has been accomplished, prosperity will be in sight, and industry restored to normal surroundings.

Miss Barbara Impey, wife of George Impey, of Trotter, who was injured in an automobile accident Sunday week ago, was able to be up yesterday.

FISHING.

Fishing's fun most any time,
But I've never found it quite
So complete with jangling rhyme,
Rest, and comfort and delight,
As it was those lazy days
When we trod the dusty ways
Of our boyhood with a pole
To our favorite fishing hole.

I have fished with fancy bait,
Fished with rods of Bristol steel,
I have heard with soul and state
That sweet music of the reel,
But I've never caught the joy
That was mine when as a boy
Fishing in the humbler forms,
Meant a pole, a hook and worm.

I have tried it year by year,
Tried to see above my head
Skies as blue and bright and clear,
And the rubies of the sea,
As they were, but all in vain—
Boyhood never comes again.
Though a day was filled with dreams,
Now I dumbly wade the streams.

Take a boy and let him lie
Underneath a willow tree,
And above him in the sky
Countless pictures he will see.
You'll find him singing to him
By the river's silver brim,
But an old man, fishing there,
Struggles too to forget his care.

FATHER BURNS
WILL BE LAID

and the day was one of the happiest in his entire priesthood. He was in the fullest vigor of manhood and by his kind and jovial manner he won the love and esteem of his congregation on his first day among them. By his kindness he was successful in many accomplishments and when he requested assistance from his congregation it was freely given.

Rev. Burns came to this community to succeed Rev. Father McCourt, who died soon after the erection of the present church was begun. He carried out the plans that already had been laid and in 1897 the new edifice was dedicated by the late Bishop Phelan. The day was an unusually happy one for Father Burns and marked the beginning of a church plant that stands today as a great monument to his memory. P. J. Harrigan is the only surviving member of the church board serving at that time. The deceased members are Joseph Solsona, John Dixon, James McGrath and Hugh Coll.

Rev. Burns would have served 40 years in the priesthood had he lived until July 6. On that day in 1892 he was ordained a priest by Rev. John Tulge of Saint Vincent College. Surviving Father Burns is one brother, Frank Burns, of Gallitzin, the last living member of the family. A sister, Miss Bridget Burns, who has been his housekeeper continuously from the day of his first pastorate in Connelville, died in 1911.

Through the death of Father Burns a vacancy that in the hearts and minds of his parishioners will remain until time has healed the wound made by his passing from earth. Father will succeed to the leadership of the parish, but the influence of the man under whose guidance a large part of the congregation has grown up in the more than a quarter of a century he has been here will continue to be felt.

Father Burns was loved by his people. Not only was he their guide in things spiritual but he always showed a keen interest in their temporal welfare. His deeds of charity were innumerable. It is said he carried this work to the extent of times innumerable himself. It is related of him that a colored man once asked him for a pair of old shoes. "Come along with me, my good man, and I will try to help you out," the priest replied. Reaching the parish house Father Burns unlaced the ones he was wearing and handed them to the beggar. "Put them on. I'll try to find an old pair about the house until I can get some new ones."

The poor always found a friend and sympathizer in Father Burns. Dependably did his heart go out to the orphan and through his efforts the Connelville congregation always stood high in its support of the institutions of the church caring for children bereft of parental care.

Father Burns was a lover of children. He took a keen interest in them. Much of his time he spent in the school hall with the students. He was always welcome. His interest in the young folks extended to the field of sports. One of the games, extremely popular to him was basketball. He was a regular attendant at games played at the Parochial Hall during the winter seasons. Though past the three-score mark, Father Burns gave no indication of the weight of years. He was full of the spirit of youth, and none of his parish looked upon him as one having aged.

Until recent years, in which his rugged health had become impaired, Father Burns found time during the hunting and fishing seasons for excursions to the mountains. He was a lover of the woods and nothing pleased him better than to get out for a stroll in the woods or an automobile ride that led him back to nature.

In his youth Father Burns was an athlete of no mean ability. Those were the days when the baseball catcher's glove was not in the general use it is today and Father Burns, when a student in the seminary, was wont to take the pitcher's offerings barehanded.

The long term of service of Father Burns at the Immaculate Conception Church was marked by its freedom from elements of discord that sometimes creep in. At all times Father Burns was master of the situation and at all times he was respected, loved, revered. These latter arose differences which he could not compass.

A priest among men and a friend of all, Father Burns was fearless in the pulpit. He never dodged the is-

Europe: "Next Time I Won't Plant Political Seeds."

NEWS OF DAY AT MOUNT PLEASANT BRIEFLY RELATED

Rev. G. W. Buckner Speaker at Meeting for Men and Boys Sunday.

BOY INJURED BY RABBIT

Special to The Courier. MOUNT PLEASANT, May 22.—Rev. George W. Buckner, pastor of the First Christian Church of Conneltsville, was the principal speaker at a rally of men and boys Sunday afternoon at the Reformed Church. The boys marched in a body to the church, after having assembled at the several churches of town, the boys band leading. The Third Ward Orchestra furnished music during the services of the afternoon. Dr. B. M. Loe was in charge of the music. Mrs. Frank Cooper sang a number of selections. Ministers of the town taking part in the service were Rev. Sylvester Palmer, Rev. J. A. Bibe and Rev. Paul Skonmiller. The meeting was one of a series being held under the auspices of the Sunday school organization of the district.

Rabbit Nips Finger. William Hoag of West Washington street, was called to Warren, O. on Saturday to see his grandson, Junior Carbaugh, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Carbaugh of this place. While Junior was helping feed rabbits one of the animals bit off the end of a finger. Junior is about 14 months old.

Going to California. The Misses Lohmeyer gave a dinner at their country home near Laurelville in honor of the Misses Shupe of East Main street. Covers were laid for 12. Misses Anna Mary, Clara and Grace Shupe will leave on Wednesday for California, where they will make their home with their bachelor brother, Mrs. Berryhill, another sister, will leave in the fall for California.

For Bride-Meet. Mrs. Elizabeth Braddock King entertained at her home at New Kensington Saturday in honor of the bride, some of this place, whose wedding to Morris Egan will be an event of June.

Teachers Have Outing. Misses Blanche and Anna Galley entertained the high school teachers with a picnic Saturday. The trip was made in a truck.

Missionary Speaks. Miss Edith Ballard, a missionary from the South Indian Mission of the Northern Baptist Association, delivered a missionary address in the First Baptist Church last evening. Miss Ballard was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Bibe while here.

Miss Dickey at U. P. Church. Miss Sallie Dickey, for nine years a missionary in India, spoke at the United Presbyterian Church yesterday morning.

Daughter Born. Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Coughenour are the parents of a daughter born at the Memorial Hospital last evening. Mrs. Coughenour before her marriage was Miss Elizabeth Bossart of this place.

Personal Mention. Dr. and Mrs. Raymond Freed of Pittsburgh spent the week-end with Mrs. H. Freed.

TELL OF WEATHER'S CHANGE

Many Flowers Give Warning of the Coming of Rain, if One Will Stop to Observe Them.

Many flowers are said to be excellent barometers. For instance, it is when the blooms of dandelions have seeded and are in the fluffy, feathery condition that the weather prophet faculties come to the fore. In fine weather the ball expands to the full, but when the rain approaches it shrugs up like an umbrella. If the weather is inclined to be showery, it keeps shut up all the time, only opening when the danger from the wet is passed.

The ordinary clover and all its varieties, including shamrock, are also barometers. When rain is coming the leaves shut together like the shells of an oyster. After a day or two before rain comes their stems swell to an appreciable extent, and stiffen so that the leaves are as borne more uprightly than usual. This stem swelling when rain is expected is a feature of many flowering plants.

Saved Her Tears. The figures of which the leaves of the horse chestnut are made up keep flat and fanlike no longer as the fine weather is likely to continue.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

NEW YORK CENTRAL TO BEGIN WORK ON MAMMOTH BRIDGE

Twenty Millions to Be Expended on Castleton Cut-Off, New York.

FREIGHT YARDS INCLUDED

Construction work will commence at once on the Castleton bridge and "cut-off" improvement of the New York Central Railroad, under plans providing for rapid work on a scale that will bring it into operation within two years. The bridge, connecting railway yards, etc., will be an ultimate expenditure of approximately $20,000,000.

The new bridge, located about 12 miles south of Albany, N. Y., will be the second high-level structure to span the Hudson river, and larger than its single predecessor at Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Extending from it will be three tangents of double-track railway aggregating 70 miles, great-ly shorter and lower in cost than the main line of the New York Central and its two important branches, the Boston & Albany and the West Shore Railroad.

Orders for the fabrication and delivery of the 23,000 tons of structural steel necessary for the big bridge, which will cost $4,000,000 have been placed, and bids secured upon the erection, masonry, graving, dredging and other work.

This action marks the end of a remarkable 10-year fight prosecuted by President A. M. Smith of the New York Central, who conceived the improvement, against opposition to the bridge so persistent and influential that it succeeded in obstructing all progress repeatedly just when construction work was about to begin. The "Castleton cut-off," generally regarded by railroad builders as one of the greatest freight-traffic projects of recent times, was first definitely planned by the New York Central in 1910, and during succeeding years it has continuously been before public commissions, the courts or other authorities seeking the necessary official sanction.

The engineering tests required by the plan are unique and extensive. The preliminaries involved extensive investigations, tests and experimentation to find solid rock foundations beneath the river at locations where the currents and shore line topography were adaptable and land available. This requiring investigation of the river bed and banks over a great distance. At the Castleton location the three main supporting piers of the bridge, 200 feet in height, will be built down beneath the river bed to a depth of 10, 50 and 70 feet, respectively, resting upon solid rock and they will be faced with granite and limestone.

The routing of the 20 miles of rail connections involved the crossing of highways at 24 points. On the east shore and eight on the west shore, but the construction is so arranged that at all of these places the tracks pass either above or below the roads with- out a single crossing at grade. To the west of the bridge the new track- line will extend inland across level farm lands for eight miles to its connection with the West Shore Railroad at Paura Bush, where will be established a mammoth gravity freight classification yard. On the east shore the tracks will extend four miles with very slight grades to connection with the Boston & Albany Railroad at Van Hook, N. Y. The third lateral will make connection with the New York Central main line just north of Shoyveaux, N. Y., the new trucks skirting the bluffs for 12 miles southward from the bridge to accomplish easy grade.

The new bridge will be in two spans, as originally designed, of truss type and stone and steel construction. It will carry two tracks, but be adaptable to expansion to hold four tracks if desired.

It will have an under-clearance of 135 feet above high-water level, which is three feet more than that of the Poughkeepsie bridge or the big suspension bridge across the East river at New York City. The tracks will be 150 feet above the water line. The masonry and steel work will weigh about twice that of the Poughkeepsie bridge, which is supported by five piers in the river bed. The Castleton structure, including the viaduct approaches, will be one mile long, from abutment to abutment. The two central spans over the navigable channels will be 600 and 400 feet long, respectively. The viaducts will contain 100 concrete towers, supporting 25-foot rectangular steel framework.

The improvement will include the creation of one of the greatest and most up-to-date gravity freight classification yards in existence a few miles inland on the West Shore at Paura Bush, N. Y. Here in a new multi-track yard six miles long, freight cars may be assorted into solid trains for movement when eachbound either down the West Shore tracks for direct connection with deep-water shipping at Weehawken, N. J., across the new bridge to the New York Central main line for delivery to the freight terminals on Manhattan Island, or to connection by easy grade with the Boston & Albany for deliveries in New England.

The railroad authorities have computed that the large investment will be justified and pay out in future years through the reduction of operating cost and capacity to handle the greater business of its highly-developed and fast-growing industrial territory.

Machinist Says That Stomach Trouble Which Had Him Almost Down Five Years Was Completely Relieved by Tan-lac.

"Before I found out that Tanlac will keep a person in good shape, I suffered for five years or more from stomach trouble, nervousness and a general run-down condition," said William J. Barry, machinist, 1833 Broad St., Philadelphia, Pa. "Often I didn't go to the table at mealtime, and nights I just rolled and tossed until morning when it was an effort for me to get up. I felt weak, tired and sluggish, my heart would beat like a trip hammer and I seemed to get worse in spite of everything I could do. "Some friends put me on to Tanlac and six bottles simply made me feel like a new man. I eat like a farm hand now, nothing hurts me, and I sleep like a top. Wilton Rides Alone.

He ran down toward the swamp, followed by the party of engineers. The horses, released during the fire, were grazing along the edge; they were wary, however, and would not let themselves be approached. For some minutes the men made fruitless efforts to surround them.

However, Wilton managed to catch the mare in a big draught-bone which had been in the front row of the grading yokes and, despite its clumsy appearance, had taken the saddle and had a tolerable action.

But hardly had he made sure of it by a grasp on the mane and upper lip than the remaining, snorting and flourishing their heads, dashed through the Jordan and galloped full speed toward the lake.

"We'll be with you in a minute, Mr. Caruthers!" shouted one of the men as they went in pursuit.

But Wilton, without answering, had sprung on the horse's back and, leaning forward, caught the broken halter and guided it across the swamp. He had no doubt that the outlaws who had set the fire were responsible for Molly's abduction and, if the trail led up to Bowyer, as he was sure it would, God help Bowyer.

In a couple of minutes he had put on the saddle and raftered the girl, bridled the animal and was riding hard along the southward trail, unarmed.

Meanwhile, the rest of the party spent a fruitless half-hour trying to catch horses. At length, after a consultation, they hurried back to the camp, collected a few more Canadians and Americans, and started out after Wilton, leaving a half-dozen to keep the workmen in check.

If the shack Tongway stared at, he felt that Anderson, who sat with the revolver in his hand, keeping watch over his captive.

"You think I'll get that fellow, eh?" he demanded after a while.

"I dunno, my friend," answered Anderson. "If you did, I guess you'd swing for it, all right."

"See here! Jim Hackett told me to come here and tell de men dere's money in de safe, an' dey're fools to be worked like dogs and den be laid off because de company's busted. Dat's all I know. I tole dem to get der pay what was coming to dem."

"Foolish!" said Anderson. "You was a fool to do it, though. That story's for the police; it ain't for me. You can tell the inspector when he gets here."

"See here! You let me go!" yelled Tongway. "I didn't do nothing. What for you arrest me?"

"Dis's de orders," said Anderson, gruffly. "That'll be enough. Set down like a good feller, now."

"You lie! I tell you I didn't do dat!" screamed Tongway, sinking back into his chair and shuddering.

They watched each other for some time. It was beginning to grow light. Suddenly the tramp of horses was heard outside. Then Inspector Quail appeared at the door of the shack, accompanied by four mounted constables.

"Had considerable trouble, eh?" he said, dismounting and casting a glance about him at the burned-out buildings and the still burning sheds.

"That fire was set by enemies of the Muskeg," shouted one of the engineers. "And we've got one of the men in there!" He pointed toward the shack.

Quail turned to his men, who were awaiting the order to dismount. "Round up those men in their bunk-houses and keep the lot of 'em under guard!" he said, pointing toward the groups of laborers that had gathered about the houses.

The constables drove the Hunkies back toward their quarters. "Two of you'll be enough!" shouted Quail after them. "The other two—Beckett and James—will dismount and rest their horses. I'll want you chaps!"

"You've had some trouble," said Quail to the constables.

"A guy, this time, trouble, inspector," answered the Spanner. "You just look inside that room. I guess it ain't the worst what I told you already."

Quail strode to the door of Wilton's bedroom, uttered a sharp exclamation and bent over the body of Jones. He came back quickly.

"Who killed that Indian?" he asked.

"Lee Chambers, I guess."

"Tell me what you know."

"Why, all I know is he done some crooked work on the trestling and beat it out of camp before Mr. Caruthers had time to fire him. Last night he came back after the fire, which I guess that fellow there knows something about."

"I tell you I don't know nothing!" yelled Tongway, who seemed in the extremity of panic.

Mr. Caruthers said Mr. Chambers killed Jones there, and got into the safe. I dunno no more than that. Du—"

Suddenly, with a frenzied scream, Tongway leaped from his chair for the door again. Anderson was just quick enough. He caught him on the door-sill and the two men struggled furiously. Tongway snatched Anderson's revolver out of his hand. Anderson's hand closed on the outlaw's wrist.

Quail ran to Tongway's aid, but before he could hold him the struggle ended. For Tongway had got his finger on the trigger and was trying to bring the weapon in line with Anderson's head. Anderson swung the outlaw's arm around, and the bullet, directed at the outlaw's head, struck Tongway's forehead, passing through his brain.

CHAPTER XV

Bowyer's Hour.

Bowyer looked the incarnation of insolence and triumph as he stood in the doorway, red-faced, red-haired, like some sleek fox that has put off its habitual cunning because it is at last secure from danger.

His vicious eyes fixed themselves upon the girl's face as she fastened back the hair that hung about her.

"That brute was rough with you," said Bowyer. "But I guess you gave him better than he gave you. I guess he got what he deserved. I told them you wasn't to come to any harm. Well, McDonald, they didn't use you too rough, eh?"

"We were brought here by force and violence," said Molly defiantly. "Are we to be kept here in the same way?"

Suddenly Bowyer stepped forward and took her hands. "Molly—listen to me now," he said. "Listen quietly. I'm not going to hurt you. I love you. I've got to have you, Molly. But I want you to love me. Let's forget it all. What'd you say, Molly? Did you ever think of what I've got to offer you?"

She tried to draw her hands away, but he held them tightly, and, remembering her resolution, she stood with them passive in his own.

"What's your answer, Molly?" asked Bowyer.

"Never!" she cried. "You know that! Did you think I was going to change because you had had me kidnapped and inflicted this outrage upon me?"

Bowyer turned toward the factor. "Maybe she'll obey you, McDonald," he said softly, and something in his tone arrested the girl's attention.

McDonald was gray with fear. He leaped up. "Molly, he means it!" he screamed. "We can't escape him. He'll get you as he's got me. Molly, say 'yes' to him, because he's won. He'll get what he wants, anyway. And it's no shame to see when you're beaten, and to give way."

The sight of the trembling old man swept away all the girl's resolve. Her longing for their persecutor drove her to frenzy. She tore her hands from McDonald's.

"If you touch me again, I'll kill you!"

Bowyer's ran behind the dean and snatched up a rifle that stood there. She raised the stick above her head with both hands.

"If you touch me again I'll kill you!" she cried.

Bowyer looked at the factor. "Then I'll tell her what I know," he said. "For years I've stood by you and shielded you—"

The factor's hands went up as if he were warding off a blow, and there was the mute appeal of a whipped dog in his eyes. Bowyer went on:

"For years I've protected you from the law. Now I've done with you."

"You can tell me, Tom Bowyer," cried Molly.

He swung toward her. "I'll tell you, then," he roared. "Your father's a murderer. He's been wanted by the police then twenty years or more, and he's still wanted. The police don't forget. I know it from the first. He came to me and asked my help after he'd murdered a man in a common brawl. He wanted to give himself up. I told him not to. I got him his job at the portage, where he'd be secure. I've stood by him, been his friend, protected him. But I'll protect him no more."

He wheeled upon the factor. "Now speak to her again!" he shouted. "You're her father!" There was intense mockery in his tone. "She'll obey you. Ask her if she wants you to swing in the jail-yard at Yorkton while she's on her honor on with Will Caruthers!"

With a whimpering cry the factor dropped to his knees and hid his face in his hands. Molly let the rifle fall and shook back against the wall. A cry broke from her lips.

"It isn't true, father!" she begged, fixing her eyes in terror upon the factor's. "Tell him it isn't true. You didn't kill that man who insulted my mother! And, if you did, you did it to protect her. Tell him it's all right!"

The factor's whimpering, incoherent wail, her answer. They ceased, and for a full minute there was not the least sound in the room. Slowly Molly raised her head, and the look that had come into her eyes at last was one that Bowyer had seen in the eyes of many men and women before. "He knew that the time of his triumph had come."

"Calise! I'm sorry you, Tom Bowyer," said Molly. "You will marry my father, who I married you?"

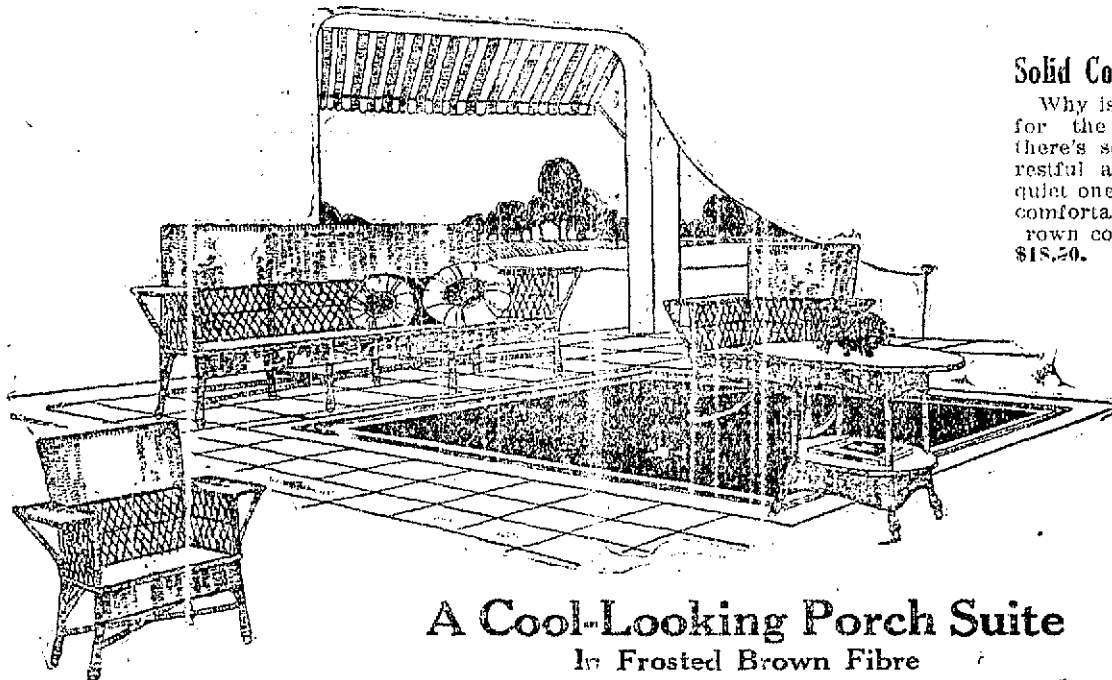

"I'll give him up to justice," Bowyer shouted. "I'll fight with what weapons I've got. Wouldn't any man who was a man fight for what he wanted most of all in the world? If you don't give up, I swear I'll hang. You know what Calise's law is. I want to see you'll have him hanged in Yorkton inside of six months if you don't agree to what I'm asking of you."

"And if I do agree?" asked Molly, shuddering.

SIMPLE DESIGNS IN FAVOR

Business Promises to Be Paris Slogan for Warm Weather Wear; New Gingham, Organdies and Cottons.

It is hardly a slip from spring things into summer things. And the French authorities have a way of slipping both of the seasons at once upon our bewildered senses, observes a fashion writer in the New York Times. Of course, there are many of their designs which can be applied to either season, but when we begin to separate the summer things—those for early summer most particularly—we find fascinating models worthy of our most careful consideration.

The French clove always to simple designs. Nothing else has the least interest for the Parisian dressmaker. So that, naturally, we expect to find more or less plainness of design among their summer dresses; which type of frock lends itself most conspicuously to the unpretentious methods of treatment. But the way they have of varying simplicity is a matter of constant astonishment even to experienced on-lookers. They will conceive a new way of handling gingham which is so plain that the only remark we can think of to make is, "Why didn't I think of that first?" But that is the whole point. It takes the French to think of it first. That is the way their originality makes itself felt.

In the shops all sorts of new gingham and organdies and cottons of varying sorts are making their appearance and these, mixed with the silk dresses and coats which will be such conspicuous portions of the summer wardrobes, are succeeding in making the dressmaking salons look like so many bright garden spots.

It seems as though there is far more leaning toward the wearing of real summer clothes than there has been for some years. The fact is that they are made in so tailored a manner that they can be worn either in the country or in town, and for the hot days they are very much in demand by all women, no matter where they reside.

Fashioned From Two Materials. So many of the warm weather frocks, whether they are made of silk or of cotton, are fashioned from two materials. That is, they will have either their upper half or their lower half made of one sort of fabric and the other portion made of some contrasting weave and color. Those are among the most attractive of the new summer things.

Then there is one very new and popular dress that is made of either silk or silk with the skirt and coat of matching material. Then the bodice section, which is made on extremely long-waisted lines, has a row of large buttons ranged round its lower edge and to these the skirt buttons with big buttonholes. Between the buttonholes there are loose portions of the skirt allowed to bulge out and supply the necessary fullness to the skirt. Some of these bodices are made of a

The quality of white pique which is stiff enough to form the necessary body to which the skirt is attached. Others of them have pouffes used for the waist purpose, and either the one or the other of these materials looks very well indeed.

Tulle is one of the materials which is used for summer dresses this season. They are not only the evening frocks, but also those in plainer designs, for afternoon, and even for street wear. Of course, the darker colors of this silk are chosen for the two latter uses, and they are then made in even slank, but the crispness of the tulle and the charm of the designs of the new frocks make them positively irresistible. Crepe dresses, of course, still hold good in a perfectly remarkable degree, but there are many places and occasions where the tulle frocks will be the very best things to be found. One always looks fresh and snappy in a frock of stiff tulle, and if one has the figure to stand the stiffness of the designs of these dresses, then one can hardly keep from being at least one of them.

Short and Tight Sleeves. The French designers are still—again—using short and tight sleeves for their summer frocks. They seem to know that there is no other portion of a gown that looks so cool as the one that clings tightly about the arm and allows those long, white, bare arms to show and to be really cool. So, if you are at all inclined to want to wear short, little, close-fitting sleeves, why, then, you are privileged to go as far as you like and to design your own dresses according to your own tastes. You have the sanction of the French couturier behind you. An excellent type of gingham dress was made from a red and white Rodier fabric in a soft, thin woven material, but it is peculiarly well adapted to the use of gingham or chintz or rattice of any of those heavier cotton materials. The little Esmalthe collar is some of what in this design, changed so that it hugs more closely about the throat and then the little edging of linen, from which material the collar and cuffs are made, is carried in a strip down the entire length of the skirt. There was a black ribbon bow under the chin, and the girl wore a drooping black straw hat with red dahlias massed about the base of the crown.

The waistline of this plain little frock is placed at an entirely normal angle and the belt which holds it in place there is made of white kid to repeat the other white touches on the frock. The bodice is but slightly bloused and the sleeves are gathered a trifle at the place where they meet the daring and turned-back cuffs.

The summer suit or the suit for early spring is a portion of women's attire which must be considered all by itself. It is something which is so necessary, but if it is too thick or even too thin, why then it fails entirely to serve the very purpose for which it was meant. It must be weighty enough to serve for the cooler days and thin enough to make it possible for wear on days which become pretty well heated, and before it is time to change to the real thin summer frocks.

With Use Heavier Silks. This season many of these suits will be made of the heavier silks. Some of them will be made of the cotton rattice. Others of them, of course, will be made from the lighter weight serges and varieties of cashmere which are now upon the market. But as for the designs of the suits they will vie with the dresses for utter simplicity. Some of the coats are boxed. Some of them are made on cape lines without any things and some of them are little short-belted jackets with rather full collars that flare out above the hips. There will be linen suits, of course, and some made of the cotton materials which are a combination of cotton and linen and which do not wash with nearly so much ease as those which are made from pure linen.

There is one of the belted suits made of white linen which shows a very faint dark blue stripe. There is a crossed waistcoat of printed linen or blocked linen, as they call it, and this shows both the blue and white with sprinklings of vivid orange in the design. The coat is an excellent illustration of those little ones that are belted low about the hips, and the skirt is made with just a little extra fullness at the side, where it is made to close under two or three flatly pressed plaits.

There are other suits made of rattice which show the whole bodice constructed of a piece of brightly toned chintz in the zanyest of patterns.

Ready to Help the Junetime Bride with—

Her Gown

For that day of days, that hour of hours when the June Bride comes down the aisle to the altar we have assembled gowns of shimmering loveliness. Organdie, Canton Crepe, Georgette Crepe are the materials, frilled and pleated in a hundred charming ways. And the prices range $19.75 to $44.50. —Second Floor

Her Veil

Can be a thing of fairy-like delicacy, if she pleases, draped and embroidered in silken net and fashioned after the very latest style trend. If she lets us prepare it, it will be lovely enough to cast a halo of beauty over the bride and the whole occasion. It will cost $6.50. —Millinery—Second Floor

Her Hosiery

Of course it will be silk—heavy lustrous silk to remain in harmony with the rest of her costume and to emphasize the grace of slender ankles. There are plain white hose here at $3. Pure white hose with contrasting hand-embroidered clocks at $4.65. And beautiful hose with lace clocks at $4.75. —Main Floor

Her Gloves

Whether they will be silk or kid will be for herself to decide—that they be most-quietest is a principle of fashion, 12 and 15 button gloves, in a very high grade of silk, are $1.50 to $3.50 respectively. In kid, $4 and $4.75. Both types are white in color. —Main Floor

Her Footwear

A white oxford may take the first step with the bride—just such a one as she finds here, slim and graceful in outline and priced only $6.50. For the honeymoon travel there's a patent slipper, with elastic side gore, single strap and Spanish heel at $10. And all types of sport shoes to choose from. —Main Floor

Her Lingerie

It can be so lovely that it seems a shame its charm must be hidden—delicately hand made or fashioned in the lustrous silks that shimmer their way into a bride's heart. Silk Bloomers are $3.95. Vests $2.50 to $2.95. Handmade Philipine chemise and gowns $2.50 to $5.95. —Second Floor

Her Invitations

We can handle all the details of their engraving for her—give her the distinctive effects that every bride wants—and save her one-third of the usual cost in the bargain. This because we are sole agents for a new engraving process called Relief Engraving, which looks the same as plate work but saves you the cost of a plate. Stationery—Main Floor

Her Luggage

Never need she worry about how to keep her things neat and unwrinkled. For here we have Mendel Wardrobe Trunks with their roomy compartments and sturdy frames to help her keep things in good order. They're priced $33.50 to $72 in North Pittsburgh St. Store. Hand luggage of distinction on the Main Floor.
